A New Year's Homily.

Has the solemn fact occurred to your mine that you are just one year older than you were on New Year's Day of last year? They keep piling up. The way seems long, when you look ahead; but book back, and how short the distance that you have passed over appears. The road that you have travelled and become familiar with, decen't seem near so long as it did when you first passed over it. This is the season of the year when persons turn a new leaf. When we hear a fellow telling of turning a new leaf, we write him down a fraud. Persons who are in earnest about mending their ways, do not wait until New Year's to do it, and they don't talk about it, but get right down to business. This thing of fellows turning a new leaf every year, is lik- turning over the leaves of a book of blank deeds. They are all like, and amount to nothing. The only hard fact about the matter is, that each leaf brings them so much pearer the end.

Yes, and there's the chan that sits around and says smart things about his mother-in-law. The only work at which he makes a full day hand is spitting tobacco juice on a stove. He always remembers when dinuer is ready, if he has any his vitals; and the calendar, with all the into go to. He would go hungry many a time, if his mother-in-law didn't bring in some victuals; and his children would have have a hard time of it, if his mother-in-law didn't supply them with bits of clothing. These fellows always attend faithfully to the children industry, even if some ody else does have to support them. When he does have an opportunity to eat a square meal at his mother-in-law's table, he is usually sesear empty that you can hear the first monthfu be swallows strike the soles of his boots. Why if he has a clean shirt, it would be safe to be that it was a Christmas present from his motherin-law. We have all known good people with large families of girls, all of whom seemed doomed to marry just such poor shoats. One of the wittiest sayings that we ever heard always comto our mind, in such cases: that the Devil owed that man a gradge, and paid him in sons-in-law

As you go along, you want to keep your eye peeled for the fellow who is always and everywhere throwing out some sign or pass-word, and pushing his way on the strength of the societies to which he belongs. How common it is, when you inquire if such or such a man is reliable, to hear the answer. Oh, yes, he is all right: is a Mason, or an Odd Fellow, or a Methodist, or something else of the sort. These are all good institutions, in their way, but a man with no other raiment would get his legs frostbit, these nights. If a man is naturally an ingrained skunk, all the Masonic and Odd Fellows' lodges and all the churches in the world will not make him anything else; and if he is square and upright, he is as good as the same sort of man that belongs to a lodge or a church.

Wind won't put any fat on your ribs. Many s man has got poor on it. The fellow who heres you by the hour, telling you how smart you are and what influence you wield, and what interest he takes in you, somehow doesn't make you feel balf so good as the man that comes in and hands von a four dollar bill.
